Location

How to get to START

Get to Whakatane then head for Opotiki on SH35 and keep going through Waihou Bay and on to Whangaparoa. When the road starts to head SE near the Whangaparoa River slow down and turn left onto Ngarue Road. The starting point WP01 is in a paddock just past the end of this farm access road, but it must be noted that this is on private land. Contact for local information 07 325 3949 & 021 1088817.

Rough description: Although only being 11km long in 5 – 7 hours this tramp should be considered as being in the fit category with tricky walking in places due to very steep slopes – especially descending – and the overall ascent of 700metres often through thick vegetation on a barely discernible track. Most of the descending is on open grassy slopes which can be slippery. The entire tramp is on private land and permission must be sought before entering the area. The vegetation includes dense native bush with Manuka, Kanuka, Nikau Palms and open grassland which is grazed by cattle. There are amazing shoreline views plus ocean views which include White and Whale Islands. One section of boulder hopping is involved so note the tide times.

Detail: At the end of the gravel access road there are farm tracks to follow to reach the parking spot (WP01) which is only metres above sea level. From here head SE for a couple of minutes the turn left – (WP02) almost due N – into another paddock where reception was found on Vodafone but generally coverage is poor. The route then heads E before going left uphill on a less well defined (WP03) grassy and gravelly track heading NE into fairly dense Kanuka. Some altitude is now gained and after about half an hour a view of the sea is seen and a ridge (WP04<sup>107m</sup>) heading NW is followed. At a high point (WP05<sup>233m</sup>) direction changes to SSW for a few metres to another obvious high point (WP06<sup>260m</sup>) with better sea views. Ascent to the NW continues until a ferny area is encountered where the slope is almost flat (WP07<sup>320m</sup>) and there were signs of wild pig.

From WP07 the route heads downslope to the SW for a few metres before continuing to the NW and emerging close to the edge (WP08<sup>361m</sup>) of a very steep slope above the shoreline. Another couple of hundred metres gets you to the first Trig of the day (WP09<sup>373m</sup>) Tikirau. The real fun of the day now starts as the ridge is narrow with very steep slopes.

The end of the ridge (WP10<sup>324m</sup>) is reached in about 3 hours then it is steeply down to a small col (WP11<sup>265m</sup>) before re-ascending to the next trig (WP12<sup>290m</sup>). From here the lighthouse (WP13<sup>54m</sup>) and a knee trembling descent on grass to it is probably the hardest so far. The next three kilometres are relatively easy walking paralleling the shore line with a magnificent Pohutakawa offering shade for afternoon tea (WP14), a small loop (WP15) in around the head of a small stream for face wash then an area with some pretty large dead trees (WP16) which looks like a tree graveyard.

At about 6 hours there is a tricky descent, basically down a small stream line to reach the shoreline (WP17) – must be reached at low tide.

Three hundred metres of boulder hopping are now required but there is nothing difficult as long as care is taken. Grassland is again picked up (WP18) and after crossing a small stream (WP19) the route ahead can be envisioned by looking up to the SE where a small grassy saddle (WP20) can be seen. From here it really is (almost) downhill all the way back on well-established track firstly through grassy paddock with a small grave-yard (WP21) to eventually pass through a bit of native woodland with blackberries to arrive at the end (WP22) or starting point.
