All times and distances from Taupo Police Station on Tongariro Domain

The alignment of Kiko Road can be seen opposite as the blue line running south-eastwards from near Te Rangiita on SH1. The location of the tramp is the red line crossing the junction of sheets T19 into U19.

Rough Description: A moderate tramp through mature beech forest in rolling to hilly terrain with a reasonable ascent starting from 844m, dipping through 740m then grunting all the way up to 1347m – giving an overall gain of 600m. Between 5 – 7 hours required for this out and back walk which can be shortened by turning at any time. No views as such but a walk that can be undertaken during inclement weather. In Sept 2016 there were one or two minor diversions caused by large windfalls from recent storms.

However it must be noted that permission is required from Air Charters, Taupo to go all the way to the slopes of Ngapuketurua and this restriction must be observed, there is also a DOC warning notice board at the start of the track.

Detail: On leaving the car park (WP01 844masl) on the clearly marked trail immediately go right following the sign for Ngapuketurua – note that the track going left is a loop from which a branch goes off for the Tauranga Taupo waterfall.

There is an immediate section of uphill on a wide track passing through beech regrowth which soon turns to mature forest and there is good birdlife evidenced by the bird calls. In 11 to 15 minutes there is a Y-junction (WP02 821masl) where the loop track joins in from the left and for Ngapuketurua the track goes right and soon crosses a dry gully. There is little to see apart from the forest and in 30-40 minutes there are two very large native trees (WP03 879masl) on the right as the top of the slope is approached.

To date no steep slopes to tackle and very easy walking on very good track and a small clearing (WP04 910masl) is reached in about an hour where morning tea or coffee can be taken whilst one listens to the small stream which lies a few metres to the south – seen but not heard.

Good path in mature forest

An area of windfalls (WP05 959masl), which has been cleared making easy passage, is passed through after about 1:15 minutes then there is a gently undulating upper slope or crest before a descent (WP06 974masl) ten minutes later. Study of the map again shows that the actual track does not follow the mapped track and crosses the old alignment several times. A small bivouac (NGA07 962masl) is found on a shelf after 1:50min total time. It should be noted that the fit and competent can use this point if desired to leave the track and start some bush-bashing down-slope eastwards to meet the NE flowing stream with the intention of following this stream all the way to the Tauranga Taupo waterfall on the Tauranga Taupo river. Minutes beyond this point the hard work of the day commences and there is a 10 minute grunt up quite a steep slope but there are a few metres of respite at the near level top (WP08 1040masl) before a short descent.

There is another bit of a grunt to reach a high point (WP09 1063masl) then along a ridge before dropping down a few metres through a dip to face yet another grunty section before having some near level walking. Downhill now commences (WP10 1125masl) at about 2:20 minutes and gaps in the trees allow glimpses of the hills to the east. Five minutes into this descent, it becomes a bit steep and care is needed (WP11 1108masl). Soon the bush starts to open up a bit and more sky, if not views, can be seen. A second bivouac is located on the right hand side of the track (WP12 1103masl) as the slope is ascended. The forest or bush is thinner here and a fairly good view of Ngapuketurua and the neighbouring hills is obtained after about 2:30min total outing (WP13 1134masl). Very soon after this the track becomes more exposed as the bush line is neared and, during inclement weather, the tramp can be curtailed whilst still in the shelter of the trees and lunch taken (WP14 1147masl).

At around 3 hours the path is rough and rocky and the bush is open enough (WP15 1253masl) to allow good views of Ngapuketurua and a white notice board (Private Land) can be clearly seen on the slope ahead – however the print at the bottom of the sign is quite small and it does say that a permit is required to tramp through the area.
